

Bella's Improvement Story: From 1 Cup to 5 Litres of Milk and Now 7 Months Incalf and Now Colourful!

Description

We begun this project at a time when the The animal was in poor body condition, suffered from silent heat and low yields.

This cow was bony, with brown coat and struggled to rise up and walk. This unfortunate case case as a result of post-calving stress that affects cows that calved down recently. This case is normally characterized by loss of appetite making the animal consume less feeds. This results in a reduction in energy and other important nutrients. The overall effect is reduction in milk yield, silent heat, loss of body condition and it might lead to death of the animal. Additionally, the immunity of the animals lowers giving opportunistic diseases a chance to attack then animal causing more harm.
